LUNCH BREAK (12:10 – 13:30)

Salle d'Or

PLENARY I: FOOD (13:30 – 15:00)

Environmental challenges, overpopulation and competition for natural resources are making it increasingly difficult to sustainably satisfy current, let alone future, demand for the basic human needs of food and water. Agriculture is the world's largest water polluter and is responsible for around 10-12% of global greenhouse gas emissions – thus it both contributes to and is adversely affected by climate change. How can we provide a growing population with healthy food produced in a way that does not harm the environment? How can different actors in the alimentary value chain work together to shift towards more sustainable practices?

13:30 – 13:45

DISRUPTION SPEAK (15')

NETWORKING BREAK (15:00 – 15:30)

Salle d'Or

PLENARY II: MOBILITY (15:30 - 17:00)

Moving people, goods and services around the world is now faster, cheaper and more efficient than ever before. As 60% of the world's population will be living in cities by 2030, mobility demands are increasing. Meanwhile, the transport sector contributes nearly a quarter of global greenhouse gas emissions, and air pollution is a major health risk. How will we ensure that today's demands for greater mobility are not met at the expense of future generations? What innovations and new transit paradigms are emerging to shift transport systems onto the zero-emissions, climate-resilient path?

15:30 – 15:45

DISRUPTION SPEAK (15')

Timothy Papandreou, Urban Mobility Revolutionary & Founder, Emerging Transport Advisors, US

PLENARY III: PRODUCTION & CONSUMPTION (09:30 – 11:00)

It is imperative that we act now to change the way we create, deliver and consume goods and services before we cause irreversible damage to our environment. But a mass mobilization of all actors – including citizens, businesses, innovators, policymakers, researchers in all sectors and countries – is needed to transform existing production and consumption patterns. Who are the trailblazers in the transition to a circular economy? How are companies accounting for climate, social and environmental impact in their business models? What can be done to inspire and empower more individuals to shift towards more sustainable lifestyles before it is too late?
